

PODEE Live: A Variety Show for the Energy Efficiency Community

- California is leading the way in energy efficiency.
 - Small work and changes everyday are what compile into meaningful thanks to program managers, implementors, organizations, regional energy networks, etc.
 - All their support to public sector, students, building performance, etc.
- Our small changes matter in small ways, it will be recognized locally, it is difficult to make change that will result in everyone knowing your name, do not go looking for recognition
- Networking is important, attending events where you may not know anyone will be intimidating but the people you meet may become lifelong friends or connections
- Understand what local government can do for your community
 - Getting involved with them will bring you closer to meaningful change
- CPUC can be intimidating
 - It's difficult to get an invitation
- Reach codes from office of sustainability in Encinitas
 - CCREN codes are being duplicated from existing RENs but modified to the specific region of service
- Buildings Standards Commission
- Involving younger generations is what makes our work so impactful
- RENs are important because cities know their needs the best so they will cater to their needs and capacities
- Oil Dorado festival in Taft, Kern County
